Private ISLAND RESORTS

You don't have to be Johnny Depp and Amber Heard to laze on a private island. On these five isolated isles, you'll feel intoxicatingly alone.

by DAVID LAHUTA

TEMPORARILY DISCONNECTED Petit St. Vincent Resort

Forget about TVs, telephones or in-room Wi-Fi. This 22-cottage Grenadines resort is decidedly unplugged. Even ordering room service or asking to be left alone is blissfully tech-free: Simply raise a red or yellow pennant on your driftwood flagpole, and the staff will respond to your request. From $1,100 per night.

HEY, BIG SPENDER Jumby Bay, A Rosewood Resort

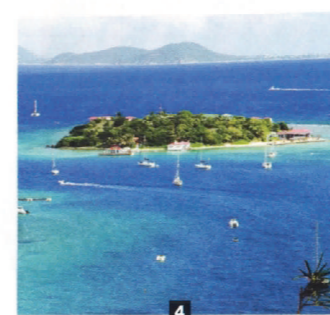

This swanky Antigua retreat — with all-inclusive double rooms — is the pinnacle of Caribbean luxury, and it's constantly getting +1 upgrades each year. Dine on farm-to-table cuisine, soak in your personal outdoor plunge pool or day trip aboard the resort's private yacht. From $1,075 per night.

OVERWATER ESCAPE Aitutaki Lagoon Resort & Spa

Make your Robinson Crusoe fantasies come true at this all-bungalow resort in the South Pacific's Cook Islands. Overlooking the lagoon, the resort boasts 20 thatch-roof bures and seven overwater bungalows with outdoor showers, verandas and wooden steps leading directly into the water. From $945 per night.

EASY ON THE WALLET Pusser's Marina Cay

With eight villas on an eight-acre speck in the British Virgin Islands, this resort provides all the bang of a secluded private-isle getaway — sugar-white beaches, emerald lagoons, potent rum cocktails at its famous Robb White Bar — without the baller-style buck. Show off your tan to family and friends back home on their webcam. From $150 per night.

DIVE DEEPER Lizard Island

You don't need to be a certified diver to stay on this 4-square-mile island off the coast of northeastern Australia — the resort offers shallow dives for scuba newbies (right). But since its rooms, suites and villas provide guests direct access to the Great Barrier Reef, PADI certification could be in your future after all. From $1,759 per night, three-night minimum.
